2020 Amelia Island Concours d'Elegance

Last year, the Amelia Island Concours d'Elegance marked the end of normal for the collector-car world. It was the final big event before the World Health Organization declared COVID-19 a pandemic.

This year it could be an occasion to mark normal's return. But not in March.

Amelia Island organizers made the tough decision to reschedule the event, moving it to May from its traditional date on the first weekend in March. The 2021 Amelia Island Concours d'Elegance will now be held on May 20–23.

By the time the Who's Who of the collector-car hobby again converge on the lobby of the Ritz-Carlton at Amelia, the world should be a safer place. Vaccines should see wider distribution by spring. We have every reason to be hopeful.

Event impresario Bill Warner will no doubt have an amazing show field, including featured Hispano-Suizas. This year's honoree is Lyn St. James, the 1992 Indianapolis 500 Rookie of the Year and seven-time Indy qualifier.

Two outstanding auctions were also scheduled to coincide with Amelia this year, the "official" RM Sotheby's sale and another from Bonhams. Although we do not yet have details about their rescheduling, we promise to get that information to you as soon as we can.

If what happened to Arizona Car Week in January taught us anything, it's that we need to remain prepared to adapt at a moment's notice. Speaking of Arizona, a second round of Car Week will now take center stage in March. Information about the rescheduled Barrett-Jackson Scottsdale and more than a dozen other spring sales can be found in this guide.

Although we always suggest that you check with the auction company beforehand, this time we really mean it.
