The Insider's Guide to Collecting, Investing, Values, and Trends

A Year of Car Fun Awaits

Imagine spending nearly every weekend at a different car event.

If you look at the listings of concours and car shows in our 2017 Insider's Guide to Concours d'Elegance, it's enough to make you want to quit your day job and spend your days just kicking tires.

Car shows come in all flavors — from the weekly Cars & Coffee at a local coffee shop to the full-blown extravaganzas of Pebble Beach and Amelia Island.

At these shows, we get to see automobiles prepared to far-better-than-new condition, which is the state we aspire to for our own personal cars. With preservation classes, we see history in front of us as we observe vehicles that have suffered the ravages of time — yet survived in presentable form.

Use this Concours Guide to plan your concours trips now. There's no other publication that has so many events listed. Here is all the information you need to start planning your weekends of old-car delight.

Chances are, as you use this guide, you'll find out about events that are new to you. You'll also remind yourself to put the familiar events on your calendar. Someone from Sports Car Market and American Car Collector magazines is at nearly every event, and we look forward to seeing you there. — Keith Martin, Publisher, Sports Car Market ■

If you collect items that you’re passionate about – whether it’s wine, cars, jewelry, or even autographed sports memorabilia – you may be wondering about the actual worth of your collection. Not to mention how it fits into your overall plan for financial security. And, what do you do with your collection when keeping it is no longer feasible?

Financial considerations. Collectibles don’t produce income, and they’re different from marketable securities in that it can take longer and cost more to sell them. So they’re not an ideal investment for funding a retirement. It’s important to recognize that collecting is different from other types of investing, and that decisions aren’t always based on typical investment criteria.

Passing it on. If you want your collection to live on, you’ll have to plan carefully. Your estate plan should designate who’ll receive the collection and, if necessary, arrange financing for storage and insurance costs. Wilmington Trust can help. We’ve been working with successful families since our founding by the duPont family more than a century ago, and can guide you through the challenges and complexities of this and other important issues when managing your wealth.

For more insight on how we can help you enjoy your collection today and prepare for its home tomorrow, visit wilmingtontrust.com/legacy.

The Path to Best of Show

Taking a car to a concours podium is a long, rewarding journey — with no guarantees

By Timothy P. McGrane

Jim Pickering

Have pertinent documentation ready and summarized for judges if necessary

The challenging world of top international concours d'elegance events is not for the faint-hearted — especially for those looking to step into the deep end as a Best of Show contender.

For many, getting their car accepted into a top concours is the accomplishment. Top Best of Show honors go to very few. It's not without a lot of effort, but for the owner the accomplishment can be memorable — and truly establish the importance of a car.

The success of any concours depends upon the selection of cars. The more prestigious the event, the higher the bar is set for owners to enter a car with Best of Show potential.

While major car collectors fill the ranks of past Best of Show winners at most significant concours, first-time entrants have been finalists — and taken top honors — at leading events. It's all about having that right car on the right day.

Today, rarity is expected, so a unique car design and, if possible, a car that has not been seen by the public in years can provide the edge. Most contenders for the top award come from the pre-war period — with either a custom-built, majestic car — or one with a long, flowing body and exceptional styling.

The level of competition is very high at top judged concours, so it's not unusual for more than one car in a class to receive a perfect score for technical authenticity and condition. The deciding factor for the judges can come down to the car's sheer "elegance" or "presence" factor.

Most cars need a full restoration to reach these levels.

Find your restorer first

Experiencing a full restoration project at this level can test an owner's patience and perseverance and, depending upon the car and extensive nature of the restoration required, can take a number of years.

Be prepared by creating a good relationship with a restoration specialist and understand the time requirements involved. In addition, make sure the owner and the restorer know each other's expectations.

If you're going to start looking for a car, begin the relationship with a restorer — one with true, proven experience with the marque or the era that you're considering. That way you can consult with your restorer as you explore potential cars, and they can help you see the potential of an unrestored car. Many established restorers have shown cars at the top concours, so use that invaluable experience.

Applying for admission

The application process at any major concours is an important step.

Provide a full detailed description and a summary of the historical importance of your car within the application guidelines. The more significant the event, the more applications are considered.

Many special classes or feature marques may only be decided or announced the preceding year. Communicating with the concours selection team will help you understand which classes are being prepared.

On to the show field

Once your car has been accepted, understand the judging criteria that the concours uses for your car's class.

The judging team will have members that were not on the initial selection team, so make sure you have copies of your car's full historical documentation available before the event — and advise the concours office of this fact.

Leading concours judging teams are very knowledgeable, and they do thorough homework in preparation for the day of show. It's always beneficial to have, right on the concours field, any extensive research documents to support your car's history and authenticity.

Be ready — and be considerate

If you plan to show your car when judging — or driving your car across the ramp if you're fortunate enough to receive an award — make sure you spend plenty of time getting to know the car before the event. This will make your experience less stressful — and may make the difference.

During the judging process, the judging team has an allotted time to devote to each car. Be prepared to have your car's historical documentation available, but if you have extensive documentation, have a summary overview to show judges. This will allow you to show them the pertinent information on your car without getting cut short during an extensive description.

Be respectful of the judging team's time.

Work and sportsmanship

"Many years... thousands of hours... most challenging... most time-consuming..." are all descriptions that can be applied to the restoration of Best of Show-contending cars at top concours events.

The owner of the car that receives Best of Show honors gets the reward for all the efforts of the restoration team.

Nobody likes coming in second. A long-time concours participant once watched a Best of Show finalist exhibit a less-than-diplomatic display of his displeasure when another owner received the top award.

Enjoy the experience and the journey, but regardless, of the outcome, be a courteous participant and a proud owner.

If you can do all these things, you may become a very fortunate Best of Show winner. ■
