Your Own Personal Time Machine

Every car is built according to the resources in its era. Cars that sit high in the air on skinny tires tell you that wagon trails were the highways of the day. The skinny tires fit into the wagon ruts, and the bodies sat high on the wheels for more ground clearance.

In one afternoon, you can see how we have transitioned from buggies without horses to 200-mph supercars.

You can see how our culture moved from the stodgy cars of the 1940s to the sexy Mustangs the Baby Boomers wanted to drive.

The automobile and the personal mobility it affords made it, in my estimation, the most important invention of the 20th century.

You'd have to go to a dozen museums to see the array of cars that a typical concours has on display.

Take your time looking at the cars and examining the information cards on them. If the owner is nearby, ask him or her why they bought the car and how long they have had it.

Ask your family to pick their favorite cars and have them tell you why.

Let your day at a concours be a visit to the Disneyland of Mobility, where the dreams of designers and engineers have been coming true for over 100 years.

How to Succeed at Concours (Without Really Trying)

If I'm eager to win, I seldom do. When I'm there for the experience, that's when I win

By Donald Osborne

Jim Pickering

If it's not judged, it's not a concours

Enthusiasts have many ways to enjoy their collector cars. They can participate in vintage racing, rallies and tours. There are cruise-ins, Cars & Coffee and club meets. Others derive satisfaction in the process of finding, researching and restoring a car.

Others find their thrill in concours d'elegance participation — and sometimes, competition.

As you're reading this guide, chances are high that you have some interest in this endeavor. When considering how to best enjoy showing your vehicle in a judged event, it's first necessary to give an explanation that there is no such thing as a typical concours. While sharing a name, they can be as different as the 24 Hours of Le Mans is from the NHRA Finals.

Concours have judges

So, what is a concours and how can you take part in one?

First, it comes down to the judging. If a show is not judged, it's not a concours. It's a car show, and there's nothing wrong with those. If you want to share your car with fellow enthusiasts and the general public, it's a terrific way to spend a morning, afternoon or entire day.

When you decide to enter a judged event, the most important thing is to find out the criteria for judging and how classes are arranged. Frankly, many concours organizers don't pay enough attention to these matters. In order to play any game, you have to know the rules.

100 Point judging

Many concours employ "100 Point" judging or some variation.

In this type of judging, teams of jurists are assigned to closely examine specific areas of each car to decide if it meets set standards of originality, finish, condition and operation. The judges are instructed to make point deductions if they determine that — either through restoration or deterioration — the car evaluated varies from the set standards.

As might be imagined, this type of judging works best in a club setting, especially when the cars being judged share some uniformity and common manufacturing standards — or are well documented.

It is more challenging in events with mixed marques in a single class, as it is rare to find judges equally and intimately familiar with what is most often found in each car's makeup. "Most often" are the key words here, as it is impossible to make a definitive statement on what a manufacturer or coachbuilder "always" or "never" did.

Some events require that the entrants they are looking for. Then you can decide whether your car — and your temperament — is suited to the competition. This is especially important if bringing home hardware is high on your agenda.

For many, simply having your car included in the company of a group of select vehicles — and sharing why you love it so much — is enough.

I've found in my own experience a direct correlation between my "success" in winning and my lack of interest in it. If I came to an event eager to win, I seldom have, and when I've least expected it, being there only for the experience, that's when my name was called.

Either way, I think it's a great opportunity to practice acceptance, surrender and humility. If the reason you've bought and perhaps spent many thousands demonstrate the operational systems of their cars, including headlights and taillights, directional signals, horn, windows, clock and radio. Many, if not most, ask the entrant to start the car. Whether they inspect the trunk and accessories varies.

If the reason you've bought and perhaps spent many thousands of dollars preparing your car is simply to win a trophy, perhaps you've set yourself up for almost certain disappointment.

Beauty contests

Other events employ what is referred to as "French" judging. It's not that the jurists are Gallic linguists, but the primary emphasis in this system is appearance. As was the case with the original concours d'élegance, these are beauty contests.

Of course, beauty can take many forms, and the elusive quality of presence often carries the day. Mind you, any type of car can have presence, whether it is a luxury, touring, sports, race or family car. What gives it presence is how it strikes the viewer.

For example, is the car quintessential when considering the category, or is it unique to the point of being, well, odd?

Which event is right for you?

What do you hope to accomplish when entering and showing your vehicle at any concours? Before you fill out an application, first find out from the organizers what of dollars preparing your car is simply to win a trophy, perhaps you've set yourself up for almost certain disappointment.

If you enjoy the car more once it's presented at its best, the lack of a prize isn't going to change it.

If perfection — or at least the meeting of every judging standard — is your aim, try to engage the judges in as unthreatening a manner possible to find out where your car fell short in their eyes. Most events forbid sharing actual judging sheets with participants, but many judges will be happy to share tips on how your car might present better under the circumstances — if you're easygoing about it.

Have fun

In my experience as a concours entrant, judge, administrator and chairman, I have always enjoyed the day most when all involved are there to enjoy their cars with as many people as possible and, most important, share the particular aspects of the passion that made them acquire, preserve or restore them for others to experience.

That's the key to success on the concours lawn. ■

Last year's Best of Show: 1931 Bentley 8 Litre Gurney

Nutting Sports Tourer, owned by the Hon. Sir Michael Kadoorie of Hong Kong

Quick take: Now celebrating 70 years, this concours is the top-ranking collector-car competition in the world. It is also the event to which most other modern concours now trace their roots. Initially modeled on the early European concours that showcased new cars, the Pebble Beach Concours shifted its focus to collector cars in 1955. It has also taken the lead by including racing greats and offering featured marques and special classes as early as 1953, introducing displays of dream cars and concepts in the 1980s, and instituting driving events and emphasizing the importance of preservation in the 1990s.

RETROSPECTIVE

by RICHARD ADATTO

with photographs by MICHAEL FURMAN

From its earliest parades in Paris to the stunning 18th Fairway at Pebble Beach, the Concours d'Elegance has long been the pedestal upon which the collector car world has placed its automotive idols. In Concours Retrospective, author Richard Adatto takes you from a time when horseless carriages were adorned with flowers to the modern day phenomenon where the automobile as an art form now commands a global audience.

Illustrated with more than 200 archival images and modern studio photographs by Michael Furman, Concours Retrospective will give you an important perspective as you attend the wonderful collector car events around the world in 2020.

COMING IN SUMMER 2020

The Year of the T

Salute the history and heritage of America's first automotive mainstay, the Ford Model T!

In a world powered by technology, the Owls Head Transportation Museum is paying homage to an engineering legacy that fast-tracked freedom across the country more than a century ago.
